Are you a medical student, intern, resident, or practicing or retired physician in the United States?

If so, please consider participating in the “Diversity in Medical Career Development” survey!

This survey study will investigate career choices and career development among diverse medical professionals. The format for the study will be a brief (10-15 minute), completely anonymous, online survey, and all participants will be eligible to participate in a raffle for $50 Amazon gift cards. The findings of this study will yield important information on the factors influencing professional development among medical students, interns, residents, and practicing physicians. The more responses we receive, the better able we will be to meaningfully characterize these factors.

This study has been approved by the Yale University Human Subjects Committee.

Medical students in MD or DO programs, interns, resident physicians, and practicing or retired physicians in the United States of all medical specialties, races, ethnicities, ages, genders, sexual orientations and gender identities are eligible and encouraged to participate. Among medical students, graduating or recently graduated 4th year medical students are especially encouraged to participate.

Eligible participants can access the survey here:

https://yalesurvey.qualtrics.com/SE/?SID=SV_6LveS9Ti4SFkADz

Please help us disseminate this survey to any and all who might be interested in participating! This advertisement and link to the survey can be sent to listservs, posted to websites or social media accounts, or e-mailed to individual medical students, interns or residents, or practicing physicians who may be interested in participating in the survey or in further disseminating the survey.

Thank you,

Nicole Sitkin
MD Candidate
Yale University School of Medicine

John Pachankis, PhD
Yale School of Public Health